THE ROSE AND THE NIGHTINGALE,

This series was completed under the lockdown of the epidemic. Maybe I was too eager for company, but also for love. My research was rooted in the theme of love. Inspired by Oscar Wilde's short story "The Nightingale and the Rose," the beautiful birds that sacrificed for love are similar to male birds of paradise, which grow beautiful and exaggerated oversize feathers for courtship, and their tiny bodies have to drag huge giant feather to fly, forage everyday, and during some specific seasons, courtship even take more than six hours per day, which makes them very vulnerable to predators, I think this is the most poetic and romantic expression of love, and it also gives me a male image, sexy, unrestrained, Dress themself up as much as they could. To capture and reveal the richness of color, I studied large-scale contemporary artworks by German female artist Katarina Gross, as well as the typical court banquet dresses of 18th-century European men.
